Mitad Del Mundo is a partition designed to fit in with the open plan space, and break this space at the same time. It enables to see (communication) and hide (privacy) at the same time. It is an object that can be manipulated: it has casters that allow the user to move it around. The linear circles provide an opportunity to see through while hiding.

But the real innovation of Mitad Del Mundo is the interference pattern it creates. Upon viewed while wondering around it, the linear circles appear to be moving. This creates an exciting visual interest in any space.

Mitad Del Mundo has a steel structure for durability and a wooden-like feel made of forneer, to create a friendly environment. Here, the traditional forneer is electronically cut into very delicate lines, and is mounted on transparent acrylic. Finally, it is bended for a uniform appeal. This process creates a new material that can be incorporated into other products and designs.

Mitad Del Mundo was developed through the course of 3 years, with parts and materials bought from Japan, Europe and the USA. It is one of a kind and is not similar to any other partition available.
